Bloomington Center for the Performing Arts*

In 2000, the Bloomington Cultural District envisioned a new arts, entertainment, and education destination for Bloomington, Illinois. The first phase of this cultural project, the Bloomington Center for the Performing Arts (BCPA), opened in the fall of 2006. Prior to this transformation, Bloomington's Scottish Rite Temple (built in 1921) boasted an elegant lobby fronted by a graceful five-arched facade, and a theatre that featured the largest stage west of New York. The Temple was the centerpiece of Bloomington-Normal’s artistic and social life. By restoring this landmark theater, the civic committee has enhanced the city’s arts resources and revitalized Bloomington's downtown center.
